

I do not want the no-call list to be weakened or rescinded in any way. It makes me sick that that after its initial activation that lobbyists and their money are making this an issue that consumers must fight for once again, and that the FCC would have the gall to even consider it.